

FLAMES DESTROY
PLANT AT COLMA

Fire that for a time threatened the Colma business district early Wednesday morning destroyed the Hamilton Mill Company plant, on Mateo avenue near Junipero Serra boulevard, destroying a large stock of lumber and damaging an adjoining residence, the total damage being estimated at about $15,000.

Floyd L. Hamilton, owner of the lumber mill, was burned about the head, neck and hands in attempting to remove office records.

The fire spread to a residence owned by A. Arata and occupied by Fred Battini, located in the rear of the planing mill, and caused damage of about $1,000. Among adjoining buildings threatened by the fire was the Casey home. A shed in the rear of the residence was damaged.

The blaze was discovered at about 7:30 A. M., and in spite of the efforts of the Colma and Daly City fire departments, and members of the San Francisco fire department, the plant was destroyed. The heroic efforts of the firemen prevented the spread of the fire and undoubtedly saved the town of Colma from a most disastrous conflagration.

Crossed wires were believed to have been the cause of the blaze. An investigation is being made, however, to determine the exact cause of the fire.

A bloodhound said to have been used in the celebrated Hightower murder case was burned to death. The animal, owned by Mickey Lloyd, was tied in a yard next to the planing mill. Frightened by the flames, the dog became entangled in some wire mesh and was overcome before it could be released. An unidentified youth who attempted to rescue the dog was driven back by the flames and smoke.

TWO DALY CITY CHILDREN
INJURED BY AUTOMOBILES

Two Daly City children were victims of automobile accidents last Wednesday afternoon, between 5 and 5:30 o'clock. Milton Lemos, 6 years of age, while playing on Knowles avenue, was struck by a machine driven by E. A. Everett, of 429 Knowles avenue. The injured boy was given first aid by W. A. Banfield, Larry Shaw and A. N. Lang, of the Daly City fire department, later being removed to the South San Francisco hospital, where it was found he had suffered a broken leg.

At 5:30, Irene Utman, of 54 Bepler street, was struck by a machine driven by Miss Grace Perada, of 225 Los Olivos avenue, the accident occurring on Bepler street, near Mission street. Irene was taken to the South San Francisco hospital, where she is being held for observation, her head being badly bruised, and she is also suffering from other injuries.

COUNTY FIREMEN HAVE AN INTERESTING MEETING

The members of the San Mateo county Firemen's Association held their regular meeting in the City Hall, on Tuesday evening, May 19.

Following the regular business session it was suggested that the Association invite all fire chiefs of the various cities and towns of San Mateo county to attend the next regular session, to be held at Loma Park on the third Tuesday evening in June, at 8 o'clock.

The firemen then adjourned to Station No. 3, on Westlake avenue, where Lieutenant L. H. Casserley, of San Francisco, a former resident of Daly City, and a member of the San Francisco Fire Prevention bureau, spoke on "Fire Prevention," his talk being most enlightening and was thoroughly appreciated by the San Mateo county firemen.

Vincent Riley, of the San Francisco fire department, was also present and gave a most interesting address. Councilman J. Twisten also made a most entertaining and instructive talk. The firemen hope to have many more such interesting addresses.

LOCAL GIRL WINS SCHOOL
TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIP

The girls' tennis championship of San Mateo Junior College has again come to Daly City. One of our local girls, Miss Irene Smith, daughter of Mayor H. H. Smith, recently defeated Miss Betty Hart, of Burlingame, in the finals for the girls' tennis championship of the San Mateo Junior College. This makes the sixth successive championship that Miss Irene has won, her first success being when she won the championship of Jefferson Union high school at the age of 11. She won each year at Jefferson Union high school and has won both contests at Junior College.

LEGION OFFICERS ARE INSTALLED

The newly elected officers of Daly City Post No. 410, American Legion, were installed at the regular meeting last Friday evening, May 15, District President Chess doing the honors. This ceremony was followed by an introduction of a number of celebrities from various parts of the state, brevity being the key-note in the length of the speeches.

B. G. Kost, Worthy President of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, made some very appropriate remarks, commending and endorsing the activities in which the Legion is especially interested. He was followed by the State Commander, B. W. Gearhardt, who gave his now famous address on the subject of Americanism, which was certainly well received by all those present, the speaker being one of those men who hold one's interest from the start to the finish. The Department Adjutant, James K. Fisk, gave a graphic picture of the various Legion activities in the state, and of the accomplishments of the organization in the past.

The refreshment committee sort of outdid themselves on this occasion in the way of "cats," there being everything from cracked crab to cheese sandwiches, and plenty of it.

During the course of the evening, "Doc" and his musical Legionnaires made their initial appearance. This, by the way, is in the nature of an organization within an organization, being a hay-wire band, composed of some of the members, and from the cries of "More! More!" it would seem that the idea went over with a bang. So here's hoping the new venture meets with success.

The evening was one of good fellowship, and judging from the large attendance, served to bind closer that bond that exists wherever former "Buddies" get together.

The horseshoe game, on Sunday morning was so well attended that more shoes will be needed to keep pace with the enthusiasm this good old game arouses. The games, as usual, were closely fought, and next Sunday will see a team sojourning to Lovchen Gardens, where they will make good on a challenge they have issued to the boys of Greater Mission Post.

CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY WITH HOST OF FRIENDS

Last Saturday evening, May 16, Mrs. Hattie Elder celebrated her birthday at Company No. 4 fire house, which was generously donated by the members of Company No. 4, which gracious action was greatly appreciated. A three piece orchestra provided the music for the occasion, all those present enjoying themselves immensely. Supper was served at 1 A. M., and dancing was continued until the wee hours of the morning. Mrs. Elder received a number of beautiful presents. Mrs. Hattie Elder is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Fonseca, of 1060 Brunswick street.

Among those present were Messrs. and Mesdames F. W. Schmidt, Ray Zanetti, P. Bernard, G. Elston, B. Tobitt, J. McNeil, W. Regan, D. Fonseca, J. Baird, G. Kimball, L. Chapman, H. Capell and B. Davis; Messrs. Frank Dunn, John Powers, Gabe Souza, Joseph Souza, Claude Leland, William Sampe, Billy Elder, Bobby Baird, James Baird, Vincent Regan, Bert Smith, Marios Santini and M. Lawlor; Misses Anna Carl, Tillie Cavagnaro, Mary Hamilton, Bernice McKean, Hattie Elder and M. Franklin; Mrs. Eva Lynch, Mrs. Marcella Rooney, Mrs. Spiller and Mrs. Hattie Elder.

SURPRISE SHOWER GIVEN IN HONOR OF POPULAR BRIDE

On Thursday, May 14, a surprise shower was tendered Mrs. Verna Schmidt Sorg, at the home of Mrs. F. Nelson, of 339 Willits street. The evening proved to be a complete success as a surprise, and a happy time. After the bride had been showered with numerous lovely gifts, games were enjoyed throughout the evening. As laughter and tears go hand in hand in life, so also was the case on this occasion, as the jolly games played provoked both. Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess. The party will long be remembered by the following present: Mrs. R. J. Dougherty, Mrs. M. S. Johnson, Mrs. J. W. Brown, Mrs. T. J. Wickersham, Mrs. E. Hahn, Mrs. Thomey, Mrs. C. Naibert, Mrs. L. Snellgrove, Mrs. H. Hutchings, Mrs. S. Bowen, Mrs. H. Olson, Mrs. F. Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. Merle Sorg, Misses Mary Mullin, Eva Johnson, Katherine and Myrtle Dougherty, Jeanette and Elinor Olson, Lilah Brown, and Marin Nelson, Mr. Clarence Schmidt, Mr. Arthur Lederman.

JEFFERSON UNION
HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

Coach Biaggini has been given an assistant. The work in the physical education department has been growing with leaps and bounds. In some of the classes the enrollment is as high as 60. Considering the fact that the coach's work covers such a variety of games as football, basketball, handball, baseball, tennis, horseshoe pitching, field and track events, in addition to general supervision of showers and the care of the athletic supplies of the boys' physical education department, it is evident that he finds it necessary to move rapidly from one end of the grounds to another several times during each period of the day. In addition, the coach has been annoyed by several small boys of the neighborhood—too small to be in school—who climb the fences, interfere with the athletic equipment, persist in breaking shrubs and picking flowers, and insist upon doing things that students in the school are forbidden to do.

Mr. Biaggini's assistant will help lighten the coach's work in several respects. He will take charge of the office and physical education equipment in the absence of the coach. After he becomes acquainted with the boys in the several sports he will be assigned to the job of seeing that they do not leave the grounds during physical education period. On the track he will pace the distance men in training. In the hundred yard dash and two-twenty he has shown already that he can beat the best time yet made by any of Jefferson's sprinters. He also specializes in high jumping. The field events will be entirely in the hands of the coach himself. Javelin throwing and shot putting are not among the assistant's specialties. Notwithstanding his high qualifications the assistant coach will work without salary. But the coach has promised to furnish him room and board in return for his companionship and services as bodyguard during the football and baseball seasons. Those who have met the new assistant say he is built like a real thoroughbred. He certainly looks like one. He answers to the name of "Rex."

On Wednesday evening, May 20, the C. S. F. Chapter of Jefferson sponsored a program in which various other high school Chapters took part. The purpose of the program was to promote good will among the various Chapters. The speakers of the program were as follows: Miss Woolhaupter, state president of the C. S. F., representing San Mateo Chapter 53, and Mrs. James Ferguson, principal of the Jefferson Union high school. Various Chapters gave short individual programs. For Jefferson, Frances Poket danced, and the Glee Club sang "Neapolitan Nights," by Zamecnik, and "By the Mississippi," by Tilden Davis. This was followed by dancing and delicious refreshments.

On Friday last Professor E. C. Goldsworthy, of the University of California, visited the high school as one of the university's special examiners. He visited many of the academic classes and showed a particular

PAYS TRIBUTE TO SCOUT MOVEMENT

How many actually know what the Boy Scout movement is doing and what its studies cover? I will try to explain it in as few words as possible.

Starting from the time when the boy is registered as a Scout he is thought—"To do my duty to God and my country and to obey the Scout laws; to help other people at all times; to keep myself physically strong, mentally awake and morally strong."

Think of all that Scout oath means—Honor, duty, reverence, patriotism, self-sacrifice and obedience all in that simple promise. These are the things that boys often consider very little. The full text of the Scout's law obliges him to tell the truth; to obey his father and mother; his own leader and officers of the law; to help others even at risk to himself; to look upon all other people as his brothers and equals. He promises to look out especially for old people, cripples and little children; to take no reward for kindness; to befriend animals and protect them from abuse; to do his duty cheerfully, and not grumble or whine, but to "grin and bear" disagreeable things and to go about smiling; to use no profane language, and to save his money.

A boy who has been idle, thoughtless and evil-minded breaks with his past and burns his old bridges on becoming a Boy Scout Tenderfoot. He stands on a new moral plane, with the public opinion of his comrades to keep him up to his mark. Besides, he immediately has interesting things to think of and do. He discovers new powers in himself that increases his self respect. Then he goes in training for second and first class of Scout, which involve real work and study. He now starts a course of vocational guidance with his merit badge studies, that cover every field of industries, art and skill exemplified by man in all parts of the world.

tical interest in the auto mechanics department. Prof. Goldsworthy took part in the World war as a member of the Canadian air forces, and saw much service at the front. As an experienced flier, he was interested in Jefferson's licensed air pilot, Colin Bennett, a member of this year's graduating class. Mr. Ferguson introduced Colin to the Professor at the end of the school session, and the two discussed the different type of aeroplanes they had used.

CLINIC BOARD LUNCHEON

Mrs. Eva Page, of San Diego avenue, entertained the members of the Well Baby Clinic Board at a luncheon on Thursday of last week. After a short business meeting the members spent the rest of the afternoon playing a lively game of whist. The guests included Dr. Hildegarde Henderson, Mrs. E. Lohr, Mrs. Mary Simerly, of Laton, Fresno county, Mrs. Blanche Hichens, of Forty-fifth avenue, San Francisco, Mrs. J. Jordan, Mrs. M. Woodside, Mrs. I. Alexander, Mrs. Della Campbell and Mrs. Ethel Bolger.

MERCHANTS WIN
BY BIG MARGIN

Taking advantage of the numerous breaks, the Daly City Merchants won their second game of the season last Sunday, defeating the San Francisco Antlers, 12 to 5, on the local diamond. It took Al Toole's cool-headed pitching to put the victory across for the Merchants. Al ascended the mound in the second inning with two men on bases and one out. He struck out the first two batters to face him, and eased through the remainder of the game, allowing only six hits. Mitchell, Daly City's starting twirler, was touched for three runs before he was lifted in favor of Toole.

The local nine confined all of their scoring to four frames. They tallied four runs in the second to take the lead, added three more in the following inning, and piled up an unsurmountable margin with five runs in the sixth and seventh stanzas.

Two pitchers faced the Merchants' batters and each was greeted with several long hits. Alcantara lasted only two innings, and during that time he watched four men cross the plate. Moyle, relief chucker, did not fare any better, being responsible for eight runs in six frames.

James Walsh found the opposing pitchers easy to hit, collecting two solid bingles, one a triple. Bonetti, Rettig, Albrecht and Cameron also clouted two hits each. The Merchants wasted only four hits during the game. The box score follows:

VETERAN FIREMEN PLAN
PICNIC NEXT SUNDAY

The members of the Veteran Firemen's Association of Daly City will enjoy their annual picnic next Sunday. The scene of the festivities will be at the Trout Farm, Stevens Creek.

The committee in charge of the arrangements announces that all residents of Daly City will be made welcome at this annual gathering of the Daly City Veteran Firemen. Those attending, however, should provide a basket lunch. Coffee will be served on the picnic grounds by the members of the committee. The committee is arranging a program which will include races for all, boys and girls, fat and lean, and all others. There will also be a horseshoe contest open to all comers.

It is suggested that all who desire to make the trip to Stevens Creek on May 24 meet at the top of the hill at 9 o'clock.

FARALLONES NINE
OPPOSE DALY CITY

One of the star performers of the old Colma baseball team, Charles Muller, will return to his former stomping grounds Sunday. He will manage the Farallones nine when they oppose the Daly City Merchants on the Jefferson Union high school diamond.

The visitors are a hard-hitting, smart team. Red Roberts, pitcher, makes it tough for the opposition with baffling curves. He has pitched several low hit contests this year.

Daly City will depend on Al Toole's effective twirling to put over a local victory. If the boys show as much fight behind Al as they did last Sunday, they will be hard to stop.

REV. J. W. FALCONER OCCUPIES
PULPIT AT GRACE CHURCH

During the absence of the pastor, Rev. J. W. Falconer will occupy the pulpit of Grace Presbyterian church for the next few weeks. Rev. Falconer is a fiery preacher of the Word, and has been known in the past as a successful pastor. A piano duet by Miss Mildred Roof and Miss Mildred Roof will be played in the evening service at 7:45, and in the morning Mrs. Falconer will be the soloist at the 11 o'clock service.

SUPERVISORS FACE
HOUSING PROBLEM

The problem of the housing of San Mateo county's official family was again brought to the attention of the board of supervisors last Monday at their meeting in Redwood City, when Coroner J. C. McGovern appeared before the board with the announcement that it was necessary for the county to provide him with an office. Dr. McGovern is also public administrator. Dr. McGovern went before the last grand jury and told them, when they were investigating the lack of space in the county court house, that conducting county business in his private dental office in South San Francisco was not consistent with the interests of either the county's or his business. Dr. McGovern appealed to the board to do something.

The board decided that there was no room for the county coroner in the court house, despite the fact that originally an office had been provided there for the coroner, but since has been put to other uses. So the supervisors instructed him to look for an office and report back to them at the next meeting on costs. Dr. McGovern said that unless the county could provide space in the county seat he would seek office space in South San Francisco.

Dr. C. V. Thompson, Burlingame's supervisor, offered a motion asking that supervisors in every district instruct their road foremen to tear down advertising signs on county highways and property, and the motion was adopted.

Abbott and Jensen of Redwood City were awarded the contract for restoring the court house dome to its original copper finish and cleaning it up generally. The cost will be $693, the lowest bid. Ian M. Ridley, of Palo Alto, was awarded the contract to paint the flag-pole at a cost of $50.

The board transferred $200 from the unbudgeted reserve to pay off Memorial Park maintenance costs. The board will inspect sanitary and water conditions at the park Sunday, with County Surveyor James S. James, who has urged the installation of better sanitary facilities. James recommended the expenditure of $3,000 at the park for improving sanitary and water conditions. His recommendation was laid over pending the inspection. At the park Sunday the board will meet with San Bruno Camp Fire Girl representatives regarding a site for camping there.

CATHOLIC DAUGHTERS HOLD
AN INTERESTING MEETING

The regular meeting of the Catholic Daughters was held on Wednesday evening in Our Lady of Perpetual Help Hall, in Daly City, with the Grand Regent, Mrs. Josephine T. Johnson, in charge. Mrs. Johnson gave an interesting report on the state convention at San Diego, which she attended. The speaker for the evening was Rev. Father Donohoe, who gave a most interesting and instructive talk.

Arrangements were discussed for a big class initiation to be held on Wednesday evening, May 27, in Daly City, which will be the first to be held by the local Court.

Plans were also made for a whist party to take place on this Friday evening, May 22, in the parish hall, at 8:30 o'clock, with Mrs. Azilda Kohmann and Mrs. Margaret Roberson in charge, assisted by a committee of ten members. Friends are invited to be present at this affair.

A special meeting of the officers of the Court will be held on Monday evening, May 25, to complete plans for the initiatory ceremony to take place on Wednesday next.

WELL KNOWN DALY CITY
RESIDENT PASSES ON

Mrs. Minnie Colyer, of Bellevue avenue, passed away last Saturday after a long illness. Her many friends and neighbors extend heartfelt sympathy to her bereaved husband and son in their great loss. The funeral took place last Tuesday from the chapel of H. F. Suhr & Co., San Francisco. Interment was in Cypress Lawn Memorial Park.

FIFTEEN ARE INJURED
IN WEEK END ACCIDENTS

Fifteen persons are suffering from injuries received in San Mateo county traffic accidents over the week end. Eleven of them were injured in a collision on Bayshore boulevard north of Belmont, the first serious accident since the opening of the San Mateo-Redwood City link of the highway. The most seriously hurt is Mrs. M. P. Vedeovich, of Mountain View, who with ten others was taken to Mills Memorial hospital following the Bayshore boulevard collision.

BILL FOR TWO SAN MATEO COUNTY JUDGES APPROVED

Passed by the state senate during the closing hours of its final session Saturday, Assemblyman Harry Parkman's bill creating a second department of the San Mateo county superior court is before Governor Rolph.

Parkman's bill to authorize formation of the Redwood City harbor district and others throughout the state was also passed by both houses during the closing sessions. The harbor act, written by City Attorney Albert Mansfield, Redwood City, provides for election of commissioners and improvement of harbors.

ODDS AND ENDS OF WEEK'S NEWS

William Foster, shot in a greenhouse in Visitation as he was allegedly in the act of stealing plants, has been taken from the Community hospital to the county jail, where he is being cared for by Dr. Harry Mason. Foster was shot by one of the Brizolera brothers as he was struggling with the other brother.

Among the last acts of the state senate was the passage of Assemblyman Parkman's bill providing for a second superior judge in this county. This bill is now awaiting the signature of Governor Rolph. It provides for an additional superior judge in this county at a salary of $6,000 a year.

Milton J. Kelly, a truck driver, was sentenced to a term of six months in the San Mateo county jail last Saturday by Judge St. Sure of San Francisco. Kelly was arrested by the United States Marshal for violation of the Jones act.

Suit for $75,000 has been filed in the Superior Court at Redwood City by Mrs. Mabel Vogt of Burlingame, as the result of an automobile accident which occurred recently on the Bayshore highway in Burlingame, and which resulted in the death of the plaintiff's husband, Fred G. Vogt. The defendant in the action is Cora A. Hofer, San Mateo.

Mrs. Anna Henry, 87, one of the earliest and most beloved pioneers of Burlingame, died late Monday, following a six weeks' illness.

Four gaunt walls are all that remain of the historic Santa Clara county court house, destroyed at a loss of $250,000 by a fire believed to have started from spontaneous combustion.

As a result of action recently taken by the county supervisors to abandon further proceedings in the proposed South San Francisco-San Bruno-Lomita Park joint sewer project, the South San Francisco council is preparing to install its own outfall sewer.

Colorado and Wyoming folk now living in this section of California will gather Sunday at Fleishacker playground in San Francisco for a reunion and to plan for the great annual reunion to be held in Oakland August 16.

Burlingame and San Mateo will observe "Veterans' Week," May 23 to 30, for the purpose of aiding various veterans' groups in securing funds for the care of disabled veterans and dependents of former service men now dead.

Fatally injured when his truck collided with an automobile in San Francisco last month, John Andrews, 60, Salada Beach rancher, died late Monday at Community hospital.

INJURED WOMAN LIES FIVE DAYS IN HER HOME ALONE

Despite her 83 years, Mrs. Amelia Zimmerman of 137 Benito avenue, Redwood City, who was found unconscious on the floor of the kitchen of her home last Saturday afternoon where she had lain for five days without water or food after she had fractured her ankle by slipping on the linoleum, is expected to recover. She is at the Community hospital at Beresford.

She was found Saturday afternoon by her son, Charles Zimmerman, of 116 Vienna street, San Francisco, who had come down to see his mother over the week-end. Neighbors when they didn't see her for the past five days thought she had gone to San Francisco to visit her son.

PAMPHLET SHOWS STATISTICS ON STATE'S MOTOR ACCIDENTS

Publication of the first complete set of statistics on motor vehicle accidents ever issued since the formation of the California Highway Patrol is announced by Victor W. Killick, departmental statistician.

The pamphlet will be assembled for use of the general public as well as all students of traffic accident problems.

Believing, however, that the traffic accident problem can be better understood thereby, Killick has included studies of all the other factors involved, such as increasing population, number of operating vehicles, mileage per car, gasoline consumption, etc.

Causes of accidents are given considerable space and are analyzed in considerable detail. Factors tending to cause accidents, such as slippery pavements, foggy weather, mechanical defects, etc.

"It is our hope that wide and immediate use of the information set down in the pamphlet may be made to the end that a better understanding of the causes of accidents may help decrease them," Killick said.

Copies of the pamphlet may be obtained by writing to the Bureau of Statistics of the California Highway Patrol located at Sacramento.

WEAR A BUDDY POPPY

Have you forgotten those fields Where poppies grow?
Have you forgotten the crosses There—row on row?
Have you forgotten the torch Which dead hands flung?
Have you forgotten the "blesse" No longer young?
Have you forgotten The symbol of poppies red?
Have you forgotten the broken, The maimed—the dead?
Have you forgotten that on some hospital bed,
Racked with pain, lies a soldier Who fought and bled—
For whose comfort were we selling These poppies red?
No? Then please buy a poppy.

SAN MATEO COUNTY TO HAVE SENATOR

With the closing of the California state legislature, San Mateo will turn to the thought of electing a successor to Senator George Cleveland of Watsonville, who has represented this county since the recent reapportionment bill became effective. Under a new measure adopted, San Mateo county will be entitled to have a senator of its own at Sacramento.

Nineteen senators sang their swan song when the legislature adjourned, and will not return as legislators unless there is a special election before 1933, or they are re-elected from their home districts. The next biennial session will find San Mateo county represented by its own state senator.

With this post to be filled at the election next year, as well as the possible selection of an assemblyman, two superior judges and three supervisors, San Mateo county is facing one of the greatest political years in its history. There will be no shortage of candidates for any of the offices, if present indications can be considered as an accurate criterion of what conditions will be in 1932.

If the United States is not going forward in its appreciation of good music, it is evidently not going perceptibly backward. Walter Damrosch's radio audience recently voted as its favorite numbers Schubert's Unfinished Symphony, Wagner's Tannhauser overture and his Prelude to the third act of Lohengrin, and Strauss' Blue Danube waltz. These identical numbers were selected by a New York concert audience thirty years ago.

WAR MOTHERS AND GEORGE WASHINGTON

The United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission, in its work of organizing the nationwide celebration of the two hundredth anniversary of Washington's birth in 1932, is to receive from the American War Mothers co-operation at once most touching and fitting. No citizen needs to be reminded of the significance of the stars worn by these brave mothers—the blue star for those whose sons returned from service unscathed except for the searing experience of war; the silver star for others whose sons were wounded or disabled in battle; and the gold star for those whose sons made the supreme sacrifice and lie in heroes' graves.

Last year, Congress, at the instance of Senator David A. Reed of Pennsylvania and of Representative Simmons of Nebraska, authorized a Pilgrimage of these Gold Star Mothers to the graves of their sons on the battlefields of Europe. This pilgrimage, conducted by the War Department, was open to those mothers and widows who had not been previously overseas at their own expense on this reverent errand. This year Congress, through an amendment offered by Representatives Simmons has authorized another pilgrimage to include women who have previously visited these graves at their own cost, as well as those whose relatives have been left among the 4,384 "missing"—those men who were lost at sea, or buried without means of identification, or whose graves were afterward fought over in battle and obliterated.

As part of this plan to omit none from the honors due to the heroic dead, the nation, through Congress, has authorized the building of a chapel in each of the American battlefield cemeteries in Europe. On these chapels will be carved the name of each of these missing men whose graves will never be found. Since the building of the chapels is in the care of General Pershing, this labor of love on his part means the tribute paid to these men by their Commander-in-chief—an honor which should console every mother whose son may lie at a spot unknown, but whose name shall be known forever.

As last year, this pilgrimage will be conducted in separate parties, the first contingent sailing most appropriately on the United States steamship "George Washington" on May 6, the last one on the "President Roosevelt" on August 19. On each voyage to Europe and back, these Gold Star Mothers will devote one or more days to services and exercises in commemoration of George Washington, Commander-in-Chief of the armies that made America free.

So these mothers of this later day, who have laid this latest sacrifice of their loved ones on the altar of Liberty, will link themselves in spirit with those mothers of that earlier time whose sons fought loyally at Washington's side and gave their lives that the sacred cause he so heroically upheld might win to victory under his masterly hand.

If it takes grief and sacrifice to bind us all in a common understanding, then the memory of George Washington could receive no finer tribute. For no one suffered more than Washington himself at the death and the suffering of his men, and no one better understood the sorrow of their mothers. These memorials to Washington, as tendered by these modern mothers of sons who fought in France, are still more fitting as recalling Lafayette and the thousands of Frenchmen who came to Washington's aid in his hour of trial.

These tributes to Washington by the pilgrim mothers will help to spread to all corners of our land some knowledge of the celebration of Washington's two hundredth anniversary next year, as planned by the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission. Not only will these mothers learn for themselves of the coming celebration, but being members and leaders on many patriotic organizations and outstanding citizens in their communities, their zeal may be aroused in helping to bring the entire nation into the spirit of this tribute to Washington.

The Bicentennial Commission is sending helpful and informative material to selected leaders in each of these sixteen pilgrim groups, who will organize these memorial exercises on shipboard. As mothers of soldiers they will be especially interested in Washington's military life, and as many of them will be greeted by Lafayette's descendants, they will wish to recall his loyal devotion to Washington.

He knows where
Fire may strike

You may never see him. But he's working now to protect your life and property—the Fire Prevention Engineer. Who can estimate the thousands of lives he and his co-workers have saved; the millions in property loss prevented?

This new "science" of fire-prevention—first launched and continuously supported by insurance companies—is but 27 years old. Yet average national fire insurance rates have been reduced by 30 per cent!

Fire-fighters, too, have adopted scientific methods. Commissioners and fire-department chiefs now regard prevention as one of their first duties. They train their men to recognize and remove fire hazards; and, knowing that most disastrous fires are caused by carelessness, give freely of their time to educational work.

In this community and throughout California, fire-prevention directly concerns every man, woman and child. And so Bank of America, in the interest of all Californians, lends its staunch and active support.

PLAN STUDY OF GRADE CROSSING SITUATION

Plans for a study of the grade crossing situation in California that will cover every phase of the subject were discussed recently at Sacramento by Colonel Walter E. Garrison, director of the Department of Public Works, and the members of the California Highway Commission. The study is being undertaken in accordance with a bill passed by the legislature and signed by Governor Rolph. It will be made co-operatively by the Department of Public Works and the California Railroad Commission.

The study will include railroad grade crossings built both upon the state and county highway systems.

Following the conference, C. H. Purcell, state highway engineer, was instructed to immediately proceed in co-operation with the State Railroad Commission to gather data showing the number and location of all railroad crossing in California; the approximate railroad and automobile traffic at these points; protective warning designs now installed; and the accident record of these crossings.

With this data it is believed that a program of grade crossing eliminations can be formulated that will make possible the early removal of all dangerous crossings from all roads in the state, and the eventual removal of all crossings, other possibly than spur tracks in more or less isolated districts.

The thorough character of the study that is contemplated is indicated by the fact that its cost is estimated at $50,000. The report will be submitted to the legislature at its session in 1933.

Figures compiled by the California Automobile Association indicate the average automobile taxation in the United States is $33 per vehicle.

VACATION TRAFFIC HAZARD EMPHASIZED

Approach of the summer school vacation period is the motive for a safety poster and accompanying lesson data which the public safety department of the California State Automobile Association has distributed to 13,000 classrooms in Northern and Central California. The set of safety instruction material is the thirty-fifth of a series distributed monthly to the schools by the motorists' organization. Effective co-operation in this educational effort is being given by teachers and school authorities.

The poster just issued is designed for display in classroom and depict a group of children setting out for a day of vacation pleasure. One of them points to a sign bearing the legend "Safety First." The lesson suggestions submitted for use by teachers are provided in the following outline:

The coming months of the vacation period are turned from days of happiness into days of sorrow in the homes of children who forget the lessons of caution learned during the school year.

Summer vacation is the time when there are more automobiles on the streets and highways. Police records show that the child accident hazard reaches its peak in the months of June, July and August.

Teachers are urged to have the children renew their resolutions to be careful, so that they may come back to school in September well and happy. The principal cause of traffic deaths among children are indicated in the following summary of fatal accidents in one large city (Chicago) last year:

Causes of 523 child traffic fatalities: Ran into street, 126; crossing in middle of block, 116; crossing improperly at corner, 102; hitching on and playing in street, 97; on bicycles, 16; roller skating, 5; miscellaneous causes, 12; child not at fault, 49.

BRIGHTEST ROOM IN LAND MAINTAINED BY UNCLE SAM

What is probably the most brilliantly lighted room in the country is one called the "burning room" in the Bureau of Standards at Washington. It's about twice the size of the average living room, and contains row after row of electric lamps that burn continuously. The glare is blinding and the heat intense, but it's where Uncle Sam finds out if he's getting his money's worth when he buys lighting equipment.

Four or five of every thousand lamps the government purchases are sent to this room for tests. First they're measured for candlepower, then they're screwed into sockets to burn until they die out. If they fall short of the required number of hours

PULITZER AWARDS

Two women were among the Pulitzer prize winners for the year, just announced. Margaret Ayer Barnes' "Years of Grace" was adjudged the best novel published in 1930, while Susan Glaspell's "Alison's House" was the prize-winning play.

B. E. Smith won the prize in history, Henry James that in biography, and Robert Frost for the second time received the poetry award, which he first won in 1924.

The Atlanta Constitution was chosen as the newspaper performing the most meritorious public service, for its exposure of municipal graft and obtaining convictions of officials.

A. B. MacDonald of the Kansas City Star won the prize for the best example of a reporter's work. After the death of Mrs. A. D. Payne, killed by dynamite placed in her car at Amarillo, Texas, police failed to solve the mystery. MacDonald investigated the case and fixed the crime on her husband, who confessed and committed suicide while awaiting trial.

Several other awards were made by the Pulitzer judges, carrying cash prizes ranging from $500 to $2,000. The annual decisions of these judges, like those of the Nobel prize committee, are often subjected to much criticism, which is natural enough. With such a mass of productions to select from, it is not humanely possible to make decisions with which all would agree.

Authorities report that more Americans went abroad in 1930 than ever before, the number totaling 673,445, which is an increase of 27,553 over the number in 1929.

COST OF ARMAMENTS

In an address at the opening of the recent sessions of the International Chamber of Commerce in Washington, President Hoover called attention to the vast expenditures by the nations for armaments, aggregating nearly five billion dollars a year.

This, he declared, is about 70 per cent greater than was spent for military purposes before the World war. It represents the cost of keeping five and a half million men actively under arms and twenty million more in reserves.

The President deplored the fact that the nations felt it necessary to maintain such extensive armies and navies in spite of their adherence to the Kellogg-Briand pact, whereby they had renounced war as an instrument of national policy and had agreed to settle all their controversies by peaceful methods. He spoke hopefully, however, of the efforts for armament reduction which have been and are being made, and called upon the business men of the world to aid in promoting peace.

Manifestly the maintenance of world peace is the most important problem that confronts civilization. Compared with it all other problems are relatively insignificant. And whoever by word or deed needlessly adds to the difficulties of its solution is an enemy of the human race.

People of Brazil spent more than $8,000,000 for patent medicines in 1930.

A prognosticator says we will have a cool summer. Bad news for the fur industry.

CLARA BARTON

This month marks the fiftieth anniversary of the American Red Cross, which is a monument to the devotion and self-sacrifice of a noble woman, who lives in history as one of the world's greatest humanitarians.

Clara Barton was in her sixtieth year when she founded the American Red Cross and became its first president in 1881, after service in caring for sick and wounded soldiers in the Civil war and in the Franco-Prussian war in 1870-71. She later worked in the Russian famine of 1892; in Armenia after the massacres of 1896; in Cuba during the Spanish-American war in 1898, and in the Boer war from 1899 to 1902.

She died in 1912 in her ninety-first year, having been active in the work of the Red Cross almost to the very last, retaining the presidency until she was past eighty-two, and doing war work in the field until she was past eighty.

She saw the organization which she founded grow to be the greatest relief agency in the world, whose usefulness has constantly increased. In addition to carrying on its regular work, the Red Cross last year raised a special fund of more than ten million dollars for the relief of drought sufferers. It now has a membership of nearly five million adults, besides seven million "juniors," who are being instructed in first aid, life-saving and other means of human relief.

A half century of splendid service has already been recorded by the American Red Cross as a result of Clara Barton's love for humanity. That it will continue to carry on magnificently in the spirit of its founder can not be doubted.

FARM BOARD WORRIES

Whether justly or unjustly, the Federal Farm Board is under fire that appears to get hotter day by day. As a result of widespread dissatisfaction with its operations it seems that the "farm relief" issue will be a most lively one in the next Congress and in the 1932 campaign.

Certain groups of business men and industrialists have contended from the beginning that the Farm Marketing Act, while imposing a heavy tax burden, would not help the farmers in the long run, because the effort to overcome the law of supply and demand by temporarily pegging the price of agricultural products was bound to end in failure.

It is certain that enormous losses will result from the board's operations in the market. In fact, it has reversed its policy with respect to the purchase of wheat and has served notice that it will not attempt to buy up the prospective 1931 surplus.

Now comes a revolt on the part of the farmers themselves. The 25,000 wheat growers of the North Dakota-Montana Association have resigned from the national co-operative organization sponsored by the Farm Board, the growers declaring that "instead of helping our organization the Farm Board has done everything possible to destroy it."

It is only fair to say that the members of the board have tried to help the farmers, but it seems that they have been given an impossible task. The farmers simply raise more wheat, cotton and other products than they can sell at a profit. So long as they continue to overproduce, it is unlikely that any laws which have been passed or may be passed will serve to help them very much.

NEW OIL TRADE PROBLEM

A new problem in the oil trade, and one which will also attract the interest of the public, is revealed in a complaint filed by producers of Pennsylvania grade crude oil, who allege unfair practices on the part of the big oil companies.

It is charged that the larger companies are corraling the independent service stations through exclusive dealing arrangements which close the stations to products of most of the Pennsylvania association's members. This, they contend, not only deprives them of their outlets, but also prevents the public from obtaining the brands of oil desired.

The so-called Pennsylvania oil field, situated in Pennsylvania, Ohio, New York and West Virginia, was the cradle of the world's oil industry. For more than seventy years it has been a constant producer, and a world-wide demand for its superior lubricating oils has been built up. Now, it is asserted, this veteran field is threatened with loss of its markets through the competitive tactics of the big oil companies.

The Federal Trade Commission is being asked to take steps to end the unfair competition complained of, which is declared to be in restraint of trade. Because of its possible far-reaching effect upon many types of business that are being subjected to increasing pressure from powerful competitors, this case will be watched with keen interest.

Historically-minded folk will probably continue to re-enact the famous rides of Paul Revere and Lady Godiva so long as they can find a horse.

Evolution will likely produce better brains, a scientist declares. Good news if we must continue to have a Senate.

WOMEN IN PRISON

Four years ago a new Federal prison for women was opened at Alderson, West Virginia, with Dr. Mary B. Harris as superintendent. A recent writer describes it as "a Federal junk yard where women are sent who have broken the nation's laws," but adds that under the guidance of Dr. Harris "these misfits of society are being reconditioned to such good purposes that the prison world in general is sitting up and taking notice."

Dr. Harris has demonstrated that strict prison discipline may well be combined with sympathetic interest in her unfortunate wards, a majority of whom are drug addicts when they are sent to her. While many of these cases seem hopeless, much success has been attained already in effecting what appear to be permanent cures.

A striking illustration of the efficacy of the prison's system is seen in the fact that of 170 parols granted since the institution was opened, only one has been broken. Many affectionate letters are received by the superintendent and her assistants from women who were former inmates of the prison, and quite a number have returned for a friendly visit.

The prison is conducted on the theory that there is some good in everyone, and it is the business of prison authorities to develop the best in its wards, at the same time firmly repressing their evil tendencies so far as possible. This theory is working out well in practice at Alderson.

"So you have a baby brother. What is his name?"

"We don't know. We can't understand a word he says."—Hummel (Hamburg).

The Wickersham Commission says we need more crime statistics. But we doubt that criminals can be reformed by merely counting them.

A NEW PAIN KILLER

What is declared to be one of the three outstanding medical discoveries of the past decade is a new antiseptic, said to be seventy times as effective as carbolic acid, yet so innocuous that "a baby could drink all its stomach would hold and be unharmed."

The new product, which is a pain reliever as well as an antiseptic, was discovered by Dr. Zeader Leonard of Johns Hopkins University, and is described as a synthetic organic chemical having its origin in the glands of a goat.

The fact that the announcement of the new discovery comes from such a trustworthy source indicates that it may prove to be a most valuable contribution to the relief of suffering humanity.

Persistence wins, they say. Yeah, a motorist may yet knock a locomotive off the track.

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

Commander-in-Chief,
Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States,
Washington, D.C.

My dear Commander:

I warmly commend the annual "Buddy Poppy" Campaign which is conducted under the auspices of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States as a means of general civilian contribution in the relief work for disabled and needy veterans and their dependents. It not only gives employment to disabled veterans, but also it aids in the maintenance of a National Home for Widows and Orphans of deceased veterans in Eaton Rapids, Michigan.

Yours faithfully,

The Olcese home has just been painted by George L. Lagomarsino.

Gene Lagomarsino is home from the U. C. hospital and recovering nicely from an operation for the removal of his tonsils.

Miss Louise Harbaugh, Freddie Bauer and a party of friends motored to Santa Cruz last Tuesday, where they spent an enjoyable day picnicking on the beach and canoeing.

Relatives of Mr. John Wohlers have received letters saying that Mr. Wohlers is enjoying very much his trip enroute to Bremen, Germany, where he plans to spend the next six months.

Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Lagomarsino had as their guests last Monday evening Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wall, of Crocker Tract, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lorenz and daughter Alice, of Mission street.

Mrs. J. J. Kennedy is recuperating after undergoing an operation at the St. Francis hospital. While recovering from the effects of the operation, Mrs. Kennedy became ill with influenza.

Mrs. Carl Schwarz, of Price street, left last Friday by motor bus for New York. Mrs. Schwarz was the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Gas Huber, in Los Angeles, and will visit relatives in Albany, New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Hickey, of San Francisco, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Beffa and son of Half Moon Bay, Julius Secconi of Salinas, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Herring were guests of Mrs. A. Bauer, of the Belli apartments, last Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Cullen were hosts at a dinner given one evening of last week. Dancing and singing were enjoyed during the evening by the following: Mr. and Mrs. R. Cullen, Mr. and Mrs. A. Arata, Mr. and Mrs. L. Gregoire, Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Martinelli, Mr. and Mrs. D. Marconi, Mr. and Mrs. A. Milano, and Mrs. M. Milano.

Mrs. Carl Schwarz was hostess at a luncheon at Charlie's Fashion Inn, in San Francisco, Wednesday of last week. Later the party composed of Mrs. Robert Herring, Mrs. Selma McMullin, Mrs. Minnie Gibbons, Mrs. Lena Joost and Mrs. Schwarz attended the Golden Gate Theatre. Mrs. Schwarz was presented with a beautiful leather writing portfolio to use on her trip East.

A most cordial invitation is extended to the friends of the local Court of the Catholic Daughters of America to attend a whist party on this Friday evening, May 22, at 8:30 o'clock, in Our Lady of Perpetual Help Hall, in Daly City. Mrs. Margaret Roberson and Mrs. Azilda Kohmann are in charge, assisted by a committee of ten members of the Court. A large attendance is expected.

Victor Rossi, Jr., was bruised and badly shaken up when a runaway horse ridden by a girl collided with his pony, throwing both riders and horse and pony to the ground on the equestrian path on the Great Highway last Sunday. The girl was taken to the emergency hospital for treatment, but young Rossi would not admit being injured and rode his pony home, after receiving first aid at the Fleishacker emergency hospital.

The Hamilton door and window mill and lumber yard, on Mateo avenue, was the scene of a destructive blaze last Wednesday morning. The fire quickly spread to nearby fences and sheds, and the Casey garage, but was brought under control by the Colma Volunteer Fire Department, the Daly City Fire Department and an engine from San Francisco. South San Francisco also sent assistance. A second fire in a garage and wrecking shop on Mission street near the Jefferson Union high school was soon extinguished.

On Sunday a barbecue party was given at the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Gregoire. A most enjoyable time was had playing games and dancing and singing. Accordion music was furnished by Mr. Maestri. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. L. Gregoire and children, Mr. and Mrs. A. Arata and children, Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Martinelli, Mr. and Mrs. V. Bollenzini, Mr. and Mrs. A. Milano, Mr. and Mrs. A. Olcese, Mr. and Mrs. J. Garibaldi, Mr. and Mrs. R. Cullen and children, Mr. and Mrs. A. There is no accounting for the ways of fortune. For instance, why was Harold Norman Atridge the meekest little human rabbit who ever entered figures in a ledger—the promptest paying, most orderly and unobtrusive guest in Mrs. Pound's boarding establishment for gentlemen—why was he selected to be the star performer in a plot involving kings and favorites, honest maidens and vampires, magnates and oil concessionists, gunmen, revolutionaries and schemers?

No one knows why, unless it be C. S. Forester, the celebrated romanticist, who has so pleasantly interpreted the moods of the fickle goddess in a number of previous stories. Timid little Harold had never been any sort of a star, excepting the star boarder in Mrs. Pound's modest place; but, as the author reveals in the opening lines, he had been a star gazer, figuratively, with his head in the clouds, in an abode of romance and dreams. That is the secret. Fate had been so impressed with the fine quality of Harold's dream stuff that it had taken the notion to weave it into a fabric of existence.

If the shuttle slipped occasionally, the colors ran together and the pattern became more variegated than the original, if Harold got more than he dreamed of, attribute it to the madcap proclivities of the weaver. The warp and woof hold together and the dyes are brilliant. Glinting threads of humor combine with the soft strands of fancy, the velvet of romance and the harder materials of adventure to make a charming tapestry.

CHAPTER I

Before Thursday

As Atridge turned the corner into the street out of the lane leading to the tennis club, the Red Lancers of the Guard were sent hurtling forward on their mission to snatch victory from the jaws of defeat. Nothing could withstand the triumphant fury of their charge.

Their young colonel, with set jaw and merciless expression, had maintained his position two lengths ahead of them alike through the blaze of the musketry and the spouting and slaughter of the pursuit. His sword, his boots, the flanks of his horse, his very breeches were splashed and dripping with blood, but his sword arm continued to rise and fall with implacable ferocity and dazzling mechanical skill.

A burly officer (in appearance singularly like Norton, the singles champion of the Morley Park club) on a big black horse threw himself across the colonel's path in a desperate attempt to check his career. Next instant the colonel's blade was through his throat, and he fell from his saddle spluttering out his life in a scarlet torrent. Even that, thought Atridge, was hardly sufficient repayment for a 6-0, 6-2 victory.

Then the emperor himself rode up to him, his hard gray eyes blazing with victory and yet somehow softening into something almost like affection for the brilliant young colonel as he hung about his neck the Grand Eagle of the Legion of Honor. It was inevitable that the next campaign should see him a General of Division. In fact, only Atridge's arrival at his lodgings prevented him from becoming a duke and marshal of France. That might have been some sort of compensation for being put out in the first round of the singles and handicap doubles of the Morley Park Lawn Tennis club's championships.

In Scafe Fell avenue was Scafe Fell View, only distinguished from its neighbors by a neat black and gold sign at the gate—"Boarding Establishment, Mrs. Pound." Mrs. Pound specialized in gentlemen—one might almost put "gentlemen" in italics—boarders. The height of her ambition was seven boarders simultaneously, but she had never reached it. Six was the most she had ever had—the number she had at present. And Harold Norman Atridge was far and away her star boarder.

First and foremost, he had lived there five years continuously, holidays excluded. Every week of that five years, save, as already indicated, during his holidays, had he paid his weekly bill. He did not smoke, and therefore he did not flick ashes over the floor, nor leave cigarette ends about, nor burn holes in his toilet table covers. Not once a week was he out after eleven, and he always came home sober. He did not hold card parties in his bedroom, using electric light till all hours, and causing a frightful mess to be cleared up next day. He washed out the bathtub after using it, and miraculously contrived to have a bath and to dry himself afterward without slopping the whole bathroom ankle-deep in water. He was never late for his meals, yet at the same time he never arrived in the dining room ten minutes early to fret and fidget.

He got up when he was called, and although he was always willing to take his turn in the bathroom this never made him late for breakfast; so that he had to put on his hat and coat while drinking his breakfast; tea and then run all the way to the station.

No strange female (not all she ought to be) ever came knocking at the door of Scafe Fell View to ask for Mr. Atridge. No bills came to him through the post. He never lay in bed on Sunday mornings until past noon, holding up all the work of the house. Instead he went decently for a Sunday morning walk and so got himself out of the way. And ever since, four years ago, he accidentally learned the date of her birthday he always brought her home a little bunch of flowers on that day.

His clothes were always neat and respectable, so that he was a good advertisement to the house as he left it in the morning. In fact, so remarkable a paragon was Mr. Atridge at the mature age of twenty-four that it almost appears worth while to examine his antecedents—it is a full three yards from the gate to Scafe Fell View to the door of Scafe Fell View, and during the time that Mr. Atridge takes to pass from the one to the other we may make a little excursion into the past.

Despite all indications to the contrary there had been a time when Harold Atridge was young; when a rather pretty and weak-willed mother had thought him exceedingly wonderful, and had taken elaborate precautions when washing him that the soap did not get into his eyes. But the pretty and weak-willed mother had died when Harold was only four, for no apparent reason as far as Harold could discover later. And Harold was handed over to the charge of his mother's aunt, who was as different from her niece as cast-iron is from putty; for a year or two his father, who was a shiftless, nervous, chinless little clerk in a London city office, had drifted along, paying for his support, and had then followed his wife—through sheer inability (so Harold's great-aunt averred) to make up his mind to marry another.

Miss Epping was the great-aunt's name, Matilda Epping, and she was a survivor of another and apparently greater age. When Harold came into her care she was verging on sixty, and had been a school teacher for forty-four years. For twenty-eight years she had had control over the happiness and moral and intellectual welfare of uncounted staffs and of myriads of children, and she had ruled them, if not with a rod of iron, with a rod of another kind which she and the children had found exceedingly effective. And the result of all her experience was to confirm her in her belief (for which she would gladly have gone to the stake) that children were creatures of about the same spiritual plane as insects, and to whom the only sort of argument that appealed was the argument a posteriori—an argument which she applied with tact and vigor, especially upon the long-suffering person of Harold Norman Atridge.

At home Miss Epping was exactly like what she would have been at school, had it not been for the slight restraint of Inspectorates and Regulations. Harold's natural instincts were looked upon as diabolical inspirations. Miss Epping considered it actually wicked to yearn to be a coal heaver or the possessor of roller skates, and it was not long before she succeeded in impressing the same idea upon Harold's plastic personality. Having earned her living from the age of fourteen, and received a good many hard knocks in the process, she was convinced that hard knocks were essential to one's well-being, and that it was sinful even to try to avoid them.

Perhaps now it is obvious whence came the assortment of habits which endeared the grownup Harold to his landlady. Harold was rather like an old maid of exemplary but limited ideas—rather like Miss Epping, in fact (TO BE CONTINUED.)

The Indians' Memorial Day

MANDAN SHRINE (After Painting by Karl Bodmer, 1833)

By EDITHA L. WATSON

THE little town of Ignacio, on the Ute reservation in southern Colorado, is astride. It is May 24, the anniversary of the burial of Ouray. Beneath a simple cement headstone, made by the hands of the Indians themselves, lies their last great chief. Ever since his body was removed to this grave in 1925, Utes from all the bands in Colorado and Utah have gathered yearly to honor him with memorial rites.

It is hard to tell whether this is a custom patterned after the white man's Memorial day or not. It is true that only six days later, we who read these lines will pay tribute to our dead. There will be parades and speeches, and flowers and flags will deck the resting places of our soldier and sailor departed, while elsewhere in the cemeteries wreaths and bouquets will symbolize our tender recollections of kinfolk and close friends.

There are few communities in our country which have no sort of services. On this day, from coast to coast, the American people give special thought to those who have entered upon the Great Adventure. But if the ghosts of those other folk who lived here before us look back and see us, they understand what we are doing, for once, long ago, the red-skinned people held their day of remembrance, too. It was not always on the same date, across all the country. Sometimes it was twice a year; sometimes many years elapsed between the days set apart for the dead, according to the tribes which observed the custom. But none the less the Indians before us, in their own way, which was sometimes very much like ours, honored their beloved dead.

The Pueblos call them "Those-who-have-gone-before." To their minds the next world is very much like this, but the departed are closer to those Above, and may intercede for the living. They come back, also, not in the luminous robes and with the trumpets and staves of seance-spirits, but in the persons of certain living tribesmen who, when they have donned the grotesque masks of their ancestor-worship rites, seem to acquire something of the power of those whom they are representing. They come back, also, in the quiet hours when their children are immersed in thought, and give advice and counsel.

It is only fitting, then, that the Hopi should hold ceremonies in their honor, when their representations walk through the villages and hear the supplications of their living children. It is a queer sort of Memorial day, true, but it is conducted with real reverence and love, and who can ask more? What a beautiful faith this is, which does not admit of death separating the living and the dead, and which holds these symbolic "family reunions" in token of that faith.

Even with this belief, however, it is impossible for loving hearts not to grieve at the loss of dear ones. Thus we hear Hopi wailing on the anniversary of a death, and if there has been an epidemic which took a number of the tribe, an official anniversary is fixed, and observed with sorrow year after year.

So, too, the New Fire ceremony sees the Zuni matron, dressed as if to meet beloved friends, weeping softly to herself as she casts food into the fire on her hearth. This food is for the ancestors and for those who died in the past year, but if we could see into her heart we would surely find some beloved one enshrined there, of whom she thinks especially as she makes her offering.

The first anniversary of a death was the one most widely observed. Then the widow could put off her mourning, and the bereaved family could take up every-day life again. The official time of sorrow was passed at the end of this year. But who, be he Indian or white, can say to the mourner, "Do not weep longer; do not grieve further?" The sorrow of death makes a lasting impression on the heart, which cannot be erased at the end of a year.

Anniversaries come as naturally as the seasons themselves. Fall comes, and those who are left behind remember that at the Green Corn feasts their loved ones were merry. Thus the Tunica guardians of the cemeteries reminded those who had corn and beans that the time had come to offer them, and the people gladly gathered parts of their harvest and placed them on the graves.

If, as the Indians believed, the next world is so much like this, why should not the departed spirits return on these anniversaries to partake of the spiritual essence of the food and mingle a little while with those beloved ones who had not yet joined them? Pere Sebastian Ruelas, who wrote an account of the Illinois tribe long ago, spoke of their holding dances that were "a token of their sadness at the death of the most important men of their tribe. It is by these dances that they profess to honor the deceased, and to wipe away the tears of his relatives." During these dances, it was thought, the spirits of the departed ones came and danced also, enjoying themselves as they had once done in the flesh.

Here we find again the great unlikeness of thought between white man and Indian. Standing between the graves, placing flowers on them, listening to the prayers and speeches which seek to recall the dead to us, we would shudder at the idea that they stood by us, admiring the flowers and hearing with appreciation their eulogies! Yet the Illinois found only pleasure in this thought, as if some dearly-loved ones had returned from a journey to be among them, and the fact that they were invisible did not make them fear some or less welcome to the feast in their honor.

Indian burial mounds were not forgotten by their tribesmen, even though they moved far from the place where their people were interred. No less a person than Thomas Jefferson, speaking of a mound near Monticello, related that "a party passing, about thirty years ago, through the part of the country where this barrow is, went through the woods directly to it, without any instructions or inquiry, and having staid about it some time, with expressions which were construed to be those of sorrow, they returned to the high road."

The Oneida often visited a mound near Richfield Springs, N. Y., saying that it was the burial place of one of their chief men. The old chroniclers omitted to state whether these visits were performed with any memorial ceremonies, but judging from what we have learned of other tribes, we believe that there must have been something of the sort.

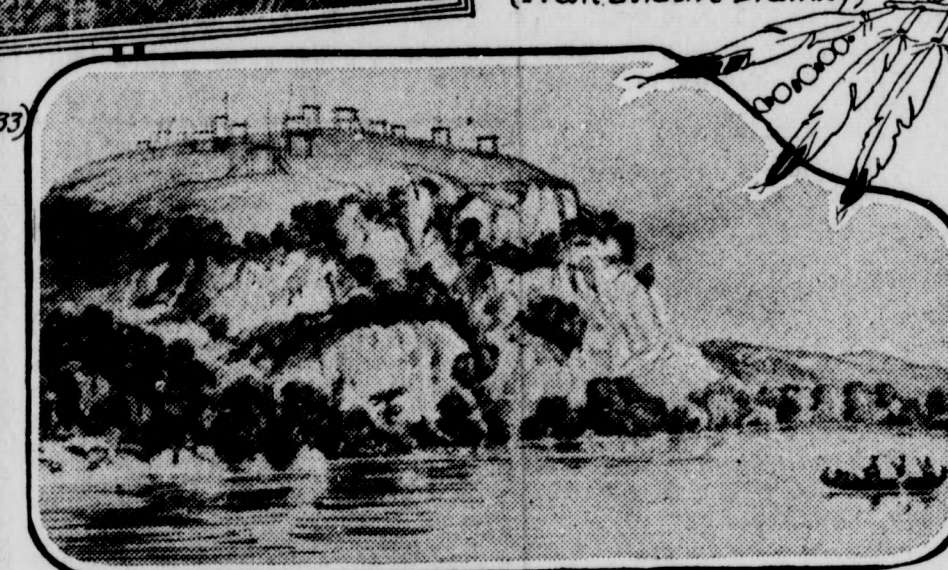

A strange Sioux memorial custom was that of "keeping the ghost." A lock of hair from the head of the deceased person was made into a roll with cloth and various articles of value. This was kept for a year or so, and other presents collected, when the friends of the dead person assembled to hold ceremonies. At this time the gifts, together with small pieces of the lock of hair, were distributed. This ceremony was sometimes repeated.

Another memorial observance which corresponds slightly to our custom of erecting headstones over the dead, was that described by Adair as follows: "To perpetuate the memory of any remarkable warriors killed in the woods, I must here observe that every Indian traveler as he passes that way throws a stone on the place. . . . In the woods we often see innumerable heaps of small stones in those places, where, according to tradition, some of their disgruntled people were either killed or buried." Each heap is increased, he goes on to say, as a lasting monument in their honor.

No discussion of Indian memorial observances would be complete without a description of the strange customs of the Assiniboin, Mandan, and some other tribes:

These people did not inter their dead, but placed them on scaffolds or in trees. In time the bones of the deceased were all that was left, and these, perhaps, fell on the ground as the scaffolds or platforms, weather-beaten and old, gave way. The relatives gathered and buried the bones, all but the skulls, and these they placed "in a circle in the plain," says Father De Smet, speaking of the Assiniboin, "with the faces turned toward the center. They preserve these with care. . . . The Indians call the cemetery the village of the dead. They visit it at certain seasons of the year, to converse affectionately with their deceased relatives and friends."

Many travelers of the early days have observed and commented on these circles of skulls, and we are given pictures of them in many of the old volumes. It is only natural that such a strange custom should be misunderstood. Some of those early observers did not realize what real affection prompted the preservation of these relics of the dead, and hence we read the scornful note that "several skulls were kicking about on the ground."

Catlin observed this same custom among the Mandan, and goes on to tell us that each skull was placed on a bunch of wild sage, which was renewed as often as necessary. "There is scarcely an hour in a pleasant day, but more or less of these women may be seen sitting or laying by the skull of their child or husband, talking to it in the most pleasant and endearing language that they can use (as they were wont to do in former days) and seemingly getting an answer back."

This custom may seem a revolting one to us, but to the Indians it was a natural and common observance. Indeed, to the white men who knew these people well, their strange ideas grew less fantastic, and Catlin remarked, as he noted the Mandan women "visiting" with the skulls of their loved ones, "There is something exceedingly interesting and impressive in these scenes." Indeed, they recall to us the famous vault under the Capuchin convent, where the bones of monks who have died are used to make patterns on the walls, and the skulls stand in rows. Travelers have remarked that the monks who showed them these strange designs appeared to know many of the skulls, and could relate their names and something of their histories. It was noteworthy, also, that they had no horror of the grim vault, but looked forward serenely to their own time of departing, when their skulls also would help to decorate the walls, and some later brother of the order would name them and tell their stories.

So it is with the Indians. Not all of them, of course, regarded death without dread, but surely those of whom we have been reading did not recoil at the unavoidable step. True to their beliefs, they went out bravely. The "Happy Hunting Grounds" of the Plains people beckoned; the Underworld of the Pueblos waited for their return. And they believed with firm conviction that they would know about the memorial ceremonies, and be able to share, with the beloved living, in the rites.

Whether we agree with them or not, it was a pleasant sort of faith. And although our own beliefs have gone in a far different direction from theirs, sometimes, still we unite once a year to recall the virtues and to honor the memories of Those-who-have-gone-before.

CALIFORNIA NEWS REVIEW

The city of Vallejo has completed the releasing of 88,375,000 gallons of water from Lake Curry in Gordon Valley for use in the Suisun Valley orchards.

A grove of redwoods at Weott, in southern Humboldt county, was dedicated to California pioneers recently by the Native Daughters, Mrs. Estelle Evans, grand president, officiating.

Redbanks Orchard Company, near Visalia, again led California in shipment of deciduous fruit, a consignment of Alexander peaches going to Los Angeles. The first state shipment was one week earlier than in 1930.

A total of 83,838 acres of unappropriated land is available for the homesteaders in Tulare county, according to information received by Tulare Chamber of Commerce from the Land Office at Washington.

Lassen National Park officials have been informed by the National Park Service in Washington that an entrance fee of $1 for automobiles and 50 cents for motorcycles has been fixed for this park this year. This is the first time such a fee has been charged.

C. J. Prentice, legislative attache and former Oakland contractor, was named assistant right-of-way agent of the second division of the State Highway System by Col. Walter E. Garrison, director of the State Department of Public Works. His headquarters will be in Redding.

Crashing his airplane into an orange grove near Porterville while dusting crops from the air, Vernon D. Boller, Hollywood aviator, was instantly killed. Boller was employed by a Los Angeles company to dust crops as a protection against insects. He is survived by a wife and a 7 year old son in Hollywood.

Herbert Hoover Jr., son of the President, and his family will arrive in Palo Alto June 1 to spend the summer at the Hoover home, on San Juan Hill, it was revealed. The President's son is now in Washington, after several months in North Carolina, where he was under treatment for tuberculosis.

During the last month, an off-season agriculturally, Kern county shipped nineteen cars of lettuce by rail and 4056 crates by truck. Potato shipments during the month from the Shafter and Magunden districts totaled 8073 lugs. There were 958 crates of carrots, 587 trays of strawberries, 4908 lugs of onions and 2177 sacks of peas. These figures were supplied by L. A. Burtch, agricultural commissioner.

During the month of April 18,929 automobiles bearing license plates of other states entered California, according to an official report by the State Department of Agriculture received by the California State Automobile Association. The number of cars checked at each of the border stations was as follows: Hornbrook, 4,512; Crescent City, 337; Dorris, 1,205; Malin, 1,149; New Pine Creek, 688; Blythe, 309; Dagget, 1,529; Fort Yuma, 6,860; Yermo, 1,757; Cedarville, 83.

Livermore Rodeo directors are closing negotiations with seven owners of wild horses for the use of their stock during the rodeo July 3, 4 and 5. Bucking horse strings are being placed "on trial" at the rodeos now being held throughout the State and the ten best—or worst—horses in each string will be brought here for the championships. Among those with whom deals are now pending are Norman Cowan, Sonora; Perry Ivory, Alturas; Jack Millerick, Shellville; Cliff Burrell, Hanford; Bob Barnaby, Perkins; Harry Rowell, Hayward, and Elmer Boren, Manteca.

That there may be a decided revival in the sugar-beet industry of the Chico valley was recently seen at Chico in a proposal that a unit of the Southern California Beet Growers' Association be organized. The proposal was made following an address by G. E. Davis, representative of the Federal Farm Board, at a meeting of beet growers. Growing sugar beets is looked upon now as a more profitable business than it was immediately following the World War when the price was considerably deflated. J. A. Latham, banker, has been named a committee of one to place blanks in the hands of growers who might plant acreage of beets and seek membership in the proposed unit of the Southern California Beet Growers' Association.

Charles Duck of Eureka was elected grand master of the California Odd Fellows, and Lucy E. Duke was named president of the Rebekah assembly of the State at their annual election meetings recently. Riverside was selected for the 1932 meetings of the two groups.

Archibald E. Campbell, 51 years of age, for seven years District Attorney of San Luis Obispo county and author of the California hit-and-run and driving-while-intoxicated laws, died recently.

FISH AND GAME NOTES

By J. H. NEUSTADT

Those who search the report of the Senate committee on Wild Life Conservation expecting to discover the latest official information about wild animals, fishes, birds and game of all kinds, will not be disappointed. Senator Wolcott and his associates are disturbed about the present outlook. They report that wild life of various kinds is "rapidly disappearing." They want the states, under the leadership of the Federal government, to do something about it.

The more rods and guns, the less fish and game, unless the state intervenes. Some of the states do intervene, effectively. Other states are slack about it. Perhaps they do not realize the importance, economically as well as socially, of wild life conservation. The senate committee may help to make them realize it. If so, it will have done a useful public service.

The committee estimates that there are not less than thirteen million active sportsmen in the United States. This would mean that when the open season comes, about one in ten of the population is out with rod or gun. The figure checks rather remarkably with the latest report of the New York Conservation Commission, which places the number in this state at one million.

Interest in out-of-doors and all it contains has increased enormously since the war. The automobile has carried millions of stay-at-homes afield. Statistics of national park and tourist camp attendance tell their own story.

"The invigorating and recreational value of wild life are difficult to estimate in dollars," says the committee. It might find more than a hint of their purely commercial value in the chapter on "Consumption and Leisure" in the report of the President's committee on "Recent Economic Changes."

Perhaps the learned economists themselves were surprised to learn to what extent industry in post-war

America is dependent on the use of leisure, including sport. Even enforced leisure plays its part when the plumber out of a job takes down his gun and goes hunting.

Only too frequently, hunters and fishermen are imbued with the belief that to get the "limit" is the height of something or other, as if great laurels accompanied such accomplishments. Their idea of a "good time" is to get the limit, whether it be duck, trout, or what have you. They, apparently, never once stop to realize that game limits are not fixed on estimates of how much game one individual can properly make use of, but, instead, are really the "dead line" beyond which game faces extinction.

In the "back-woods" country we still have people who do not consider themselves amenable to and are consistent violators of our game laws. However, this much can be said for them. They take only what they can use—no more.

Persistent law violators as they are, the question arises whether they actually kill as much game illegally, the year round, as is killed by some self-styled and limit-seeking sportsmen who a persistently let such game go to waste.

Forget the "limit"—and take only what you can reasonably hope to use. Take what birds you can use only, and practice on clay birds. Take what fish you can use, and practice your casting in contest pools.

No greater hog exists than the game hog—he who kills for the lust of killing. Such are no better than poachers or violators of closed-season laws. They are not as good—for they waste, deliberately waste, wild game life, the conservation of which is now commanding the time and attention of all state governments and commanding the attention of our federal government, with millions of dollars being spent to save the game which such game hogs are deliberately wasting.

Forget the "limit." Take no more than you can reasonably use. Spread that cry!

Another ominous fact looms up. Hunting license sales in California for 1930 show a shrinkage of $42,000 compared with 1929 receipts. No game—no licenses—eh? Fishing licenses increased $40,000 for the same period.

Ursula Bitter, 9 years old, was awarded first prize in the cooking contest for children held in Berlin.

THE SAGE OF KINGS MOUNTAINS PASSES

George J. Harkins, colorful figure of the King's Mountain district for many years and well known for his stories of early day Peninsula life, died at the Mills Memorial hospital in San Mateo Saturday night. He had been ill only a few days. Neighbors found the aged pioneer when they investigated after failing to see him about his ranch properties.

Harkins, born on King's mountain, where his father, the late John Harkins, was a pioneer cattle baron, remembered the days when Indians roamed the Peninsula and when many of his father's herds were slaughtered by grizzly bear. To many friends he was known as the "mayor of Redwood Park." In addition to his large ranch holdings in the Sierra Morent, Harkins was in charge of other large tracts owned by non-residents.

JUNE AN IMPORTANT MONTH FOR THE AMERICAN LEGION

June will be an important month in the activities of the American Legion, according to James K. Fisk, State Adjutant. The organization is at full strength at this period and many phases of Legion service are in full swing in every community.

"Flag day, which comes on June 14, is observed by all Posts," says Fisk. "The American flag is the symbol of all that the Legion tries to do, and this day gives the organization the opportunity of educating the public on the proper respect that should be paid to the flag."

"On June 17, many of the Citizens' Military Training Camps open, following an intensive campaign by the Legion in sponsoring this work. The Legion is advocating the Citizens' Military Training Camp as a school of citizenship, as well as a school for national defense. The opening of these camps affords the Legion Posts in their vicinity the opportunity of teaching the public, through the visits of parents to the camps, their constructive worthiness."

"June also marks the beginning of the Legion's summer campaign to emphasize safety first, because this month is the first of the tourist season."

LONGFELLOW P. T. A. MEETING

Mrs. Paul Springer newly elected president of the Second district, was the guest of honor at the Longfellow P. T. A. installation luncheon and meeting held in the school auditorium, Thursday, May 14. Mrs. Springer in her talk expressed the advantage of the membership and moral support of fathers as well as mothers of the children in the P. T. A.

Miss Alice Chalmers, principal of Longfellow school, welcomed the members and visitors and also spoke of the splendid work accomplished under the direction of the outgoing president, Mrs. M. F. Coll.

Mrs. Frank Eickoff, newly elected Counselor of the New Mission section, was the installing officer.

A past president's pin was presented to Mrs. Coll, who expressed her thanks to the Association.

Mrs. Nellie F. Peterson, retiring historian, gave a most interesting report.

Mrs. J. W. Graves, physical education instructor, announced that Longfellow P. T. A. was the first to have a committee take charge of children attending the gymnasium at St. Luke's Hospital every Saturday morning for Posture and Physical Education. Mrs. Chas. Verbrugge, Mrs. L. W. Prestidge and Mrs. G. W. Olmstead are the members who in their turn accompany the children.

Folk dances by the children under the direction of Miss M. Davie and Miss Josephine Kane; and a piano duet played by Lorraine Love and Louise Erickson were enjoyed by all present.

One hundred and eight members and visitors signed the registration book.

Mrs. James Carroll, Hospitality chairman, assisted by Mrs. Clyde Reed, Mrs. Thomas Emery and Mrs. Arnold Rasmussen deserve much credit for the luncheon served preceding the meeting. Girls of the cooking class served the tables.

On Friday afternoon, May 15, the pupils of Miss Nellie Foley's 4-A Grade enjoyed an ice-cream party given by the P. T. A. for bringing most new members into the unit during the recent membership drive.

Longfellow has been made a Standard Association according to the latest report from the Second district.

CALIFORNIANS RECOMMEND DRIVE DOWN THE PENINSULA

The one hundred and twenty-five mile drive from San Francisco down the peninsula through the Santa Clara Valley and the Santa Cruz Mountains to the Monterey Peninsula is the first trip recommended to tourist visitors in the bay metropolis in a new vacation planning booklet just issued by Californians, Inc. The new booklet, with twenty-four pages of descriptive matter, is illustrated with 116 exceptional photographic art studies of the six principal scenic regions of the California centered by San Francisco.

The new booklet is a companion piece of literature now being mailed in response to tens of thousands of coupon requests received from the readers of the forty large eastern newspapers now running a total of 76,000,000 copies of the Californians, Inc., advertising of San Francisco and Northern and Central California.

RECOGNITION FOR DISCOVERER

At last there is becoming apparent a tendency to bestow upon Leif Ericson some of the honors due him as the first known explorer to have touched upon American shores. For many years the public generally has been taught to look upon Columbus, who nearly five hundred years later than Ericson touched upon land in the Western Hemisphere in his search for a route to India, as the discoverer of America.

Minnesota has decided to make October 9, Lief Ericson day. A bill just signed by Governor Floyd B. Olson requires the public schools of the state to devote a half hour on that day "to appropriate exercises relative to and in commemoration of the life and history of Lief Ericson and the ideals he fostered."

"Teachers can say all the want to about Columbus and his jaunt across the Atlantic in 1492; and they can pay tribute to the Italian on his day, October 12, but on October 9 young Minnesota must pause to consider the prior claims of the Norseman. His friends do not ask that Columbus be banished from the history books, but they do want the youth of the nation to be taught that Lief Ericson got over to the mainland for a first call about four centuries sooner," states an article in the Christian Science Monitor.

Other states have also taken steps toward recognition of the Norseman. Wisconsin has a Lief Ericson day, which it observed for the first time last October. A bill to this effect passed the lower house at the last session of the legislature of Washington, but failed because of adjournment before the Senate could act. The new magnificent lake-shore boulevard in Chicago is officially known as "Lief Ericson Drive." Norwegians of the city have obtained permission of the park officials to erect a large monument to the explorer in a commanding position on the drive, and a campaign to raise $400,000 for the purpose has been launched.

SCARCITY OF TURTLE FOOD THE CAUSE OF ACCUSATIONS

Turtle food is at a premium at Placerville. Although more of the amphibians have been captured for the races to be held at Placerville on May 30 and 31 by the American Legion during the "Hit the Gold Trail to Hangtown" celebration than ever before, the scarcity of the delicacies enjoyed by turtles is causing considerable anxiety. Accusations are being freely made that some of the Legionnaires have cornered the product so their entries will have an edge over the others in the races. Other rumors would have you understand that some of the food has been tampered with, placing many of the foremost contestants in a stupor.

The big race of the series will be the "Jim Fisk Derby," named in honor of James K. Fisk, State Adjutant of the Legion. This race will be run on the afternoon of May 30, and turtle No. 1 has been named after Fisk. All the Legionnaires say it should be a sure winner—if somebody doesn't slip him a bit of food which will place him in a lethargic condition before the race.

"THE TRAIL OF THE PADRES" TO BE PRESENTED SUNDAY

To the music of old guitars, a hundred players will wind their way over a hillside trail onto the stage of the natural amphitheatre on Mount Tamalpais on Sunday, May 24, when the Mountain Play Association presents its eighteenth century drama, "The Trail of the Padres," romantic story of old California, by Frederic Stuart Smith.

Clyde Arbuckle, who has made a special study of the music of the period, will lead the stringed instruments. Folk dances in colorful costume will add effective pageantry, while Leonore Romaine, recently of the New York Winter Garden, is to do the solo parts of the incidental music.

If baby could be particular

...She'd have her mother cook with ELECTRICITY

"RIGHT NOW when I need the most care and attention, mother should spend almost all her time with me.

"But just when I want her, she has to be in the kitchen. If she would only let an electric range cook her meals and daddy's automatically, she wouldn't need to stay in the kitchen—she could be with me."

It's easy to have perfect cooking without the usual bother of watching in the kitchen—when you cook with electricity. And that's because of the time and temperature controls. You simply place the food in the oven, say at one o'clock, and set the controls. At three o'clock the meal starts cooking. At six, the electricity turns off. The insulated oven keeps the food hot until you are ready to serve it. Think how nice this will be when company is coming for dinner on a day when you want to be free during the whole afternoon.

Then too, cooking with electricity is economical. The cost for current averages 1c a meal per person. Moreover, cooking elements are faster today—as fast as you'd want them.

A small down payment places the electric range of your choice in your kitchen, ready to use. Come into our office or a dealer's store and see the beautiful new electric ranges.

VOLUME 4 FRIDAY, MAY 22, 1931 NUMBER 43

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

He: "I've got a great mind to rock the boat and frighten you."

She: "Once before a young man tried that with me and the boat upset."

He: "And what did you do?"

She: "Oh, I swam ashore and notified the coroner."

A safe, sound, and profitable investment for the health of the family—that is what it means to build a home.

Graft
A colored man went to his pastor and handed him a letter to the Lord, which read: "Please send this old darkey $50 right away." The pastor called together several of his friends and said, "This poor man has so much faith in the Lord, we should not let him be disappointed. Let's make a collection for him." They contributed $42 which was sent to the ingenious petitioner. Next day the colored man gave the pastor another letter. This one ran: "Dear Lord: de nex' time yo' send dis darkey any money, don't send it through no parson—send it to me direct."

"I do not care to fool any man; when he discovers I have fooled him, he will do me more harm than my cunning did me good."

The doctor smiled as he entered the room. "You look very much better today."

"Yes," said the patient; "I followed the directions on your medicine bottle."

"What were they?"

"Keep the bottle tightly corked."

ABERDEEN Lump Coal.

Tunnies in restaurant: "Schal, how can you eat with a knife?"

Schal: "It is not so easy as it looks. Look around at the other guests; not one of 'em can do it."
